“ I loved Mr. Shah. What stood out to me most was the deep care and devotion he had for his mother who we all called "Ba". I never saw an adult man look out for, laugh with, and cherish his mother the way he did.

He honored his wife with the same warmth and admiration, treating her (amazing!!) cooking as something sacred—no one could compare to her pani puris and masalas in his eyes.

But most of all, he was incredibly proud of Reena. Not just for her brilliant mind and remarkable degrees and accomplishments, but for the bold, passionate risks she took and the way she built her own family with the same closeness, values, love, and laughter she was raised with.

I will always be grateful to Mr. Shah for teaching me the meaning of “Om.” One evening, after a meal at his home, I asked about a picture on the wall. He explained that it was “Om”: the sound of all things.

May he rest in peace, surrounded by that beautiful sound.
