“ There are no words that feel big enough to hold the kind of person you were.

You were the light in my everyday life, even from miles away, you made me laugh, lifted me up, and reminded me who I was when I forgot.

You were the sweetest, kindest, most confident and empathetic soul I've ever known. The kind of person people spend their whole lives searching for, and I was lucky enough to call you my best friend.

I wish I had more photos of us, something I could hold onto, especially because we were long distance besties and so many of our memories from college to now feel like they've been lost in time. But the truth is, we've lived so many lives together, and you live in every memory, every laugh, every moment we shared. And that means more than anything I could ever capture.

Thank you for loving me the way you did. Thank you for being you. I will carry you with me always.

I love you forever and ever Nene ☐

“ i’ve written this a plethora of times, & still no words can truly depict this feeling bc how do you even grieve or mourn an ex bff? i grieved our friendship two years ago & now.. im grieving you. you were my person for so many years, the truest definition of a free spirit. when your mom texted me, my heart dropped, and since then, i have felt a wave of emotions in the silence that fills the room when life slows down. no matter how things ended between us our friendship was real, & i never imagined a world where you just wouldn’t be here anymore.

you were one of my best friends for a very long time. your life mattered, and it mattered to me despite how things turned out. i’ll always cherish the memories that were carefully woven into the us that existed way back when.

my love for you was never dependent on things ending perfectly for us. i loved you for who you were, and a piece of me always will, which is why i believe im so tore up about this. this honestly doesn’t feel real at all. you had so much life left to live. so many goals, dreams, and aspirations.

i couldn’t forget you if i tried, & trust me... i tried. rest in the most perfect peace, i love you always nene 💕
