“ *Ewurama: Hello grandma
Grandma: Hello my granddaughter how are you and my son in law?*

Ewurama: Eii grandma there is no son in law now ooo

Grandma: Don't worry he will come, I will pray for you but don't forget to bring me my first class. I will be waiting for your graduation and after that you will come and stay with me okay.

Ewurama :Yes grandma

All my roommates and my friends knew you because you would ask how each and everyone was doing

Even when you had an argument with maa you would call me and report her and tell me to warn her for you.

I never even got to meet you in person but I just know that you're a wonderful person and the best grandma anyone could wish for.

Now who is going to attend my graduation and see the son in law that you prayed for.

I miss you soo much but I know that God's plan is the best

Rest in perfect peace grandma

Till we meet again 🕊️🕊️🕊️

“ For me, to be a prayerful woman of God, preach, love children is by you. I remembered the day I was commissioned as a Evangelist of the Methodist church, you called me at midnight prayed with me, blessed and encouraged me. Anytime I have a preaching appointment and I finish with my sermon, I will call you and we discuss it, even when I'm there preaching my phone will be sending messages, and it reads, Rene add this or that to the sermon. Maa yesterday I went to preach and there was no one to discuss my sermon with, Maa where are you? Maa you encouraged me to go into children evangelism, we prayed about it and now I'm having 1,200 children whom I go to every Wednesday to preach to, even our new branch you prayed with me and now we are having 100 children who attend Sunday School every Sunday. Maa my heart is so heavy my eyes is full of tears I don't know how to say goodbye. Death why have you taken my pastor, bestfriend, prayer partner, Bible study partner and mother away. Nothing on this earth can change my love for you. Your grandchildren are waiting to see your face or hear your sweet voice but eiiii Maa is very difficult for me. May the almighty God keep you safe till we meet again.

“ Mum, we love you more than words can say. Though we will miss you every day, your love will guide us, and your memory will live on in our hearts

“ I may have known you for only a short time, but you welcomed me with so much love, just like your own lastborn. Your vibrant spirit always made me smile.

Whenever you were on the phone with your last baby and I chipped in with my “broken Ga,” you would laugh at me. Those moments were special.

I wish I had more time to know you better. You were truly a blessing, and I’m comforted knowing you’re in a better place.

I’m still waiting for my materials, Mummy. ☐
Rest well.

“ You were the only who could comfort me in my sad moments with your motivational messages, uplifting songs and prayers. I'm currently at a loss but trust that you are in a better place from this cruel world. Sleep with the Angels my Sweetest Mama. We will meet one day to continue gisting. 🥹🥹🥹
